Charter Operations

Recommending skippers or charter operations can be a mug's game, so much is based on personal chemistry. And of course the best skipper in the world cannot possibly control the weather, how the fish are going to react on any particular day or - and I have to mention it - anglers' degrees of competence.

Obviously within our Members Only area there are links to any number of top charter skippers we have used, both in this country and overseas, and would have no hesitation in recommending.

But here, and it will be developed over time, I thought I'd start by just suggesting a few in the Cape Verde Islands identified in this BLOG. If you want to encounter your first Marlin - and look in the period April to July in particular - this is perhaps the venue to start with?
